Quick Answer: Watching videos to earn money is a legitimate "watch-and-earn" model, but it will not replace a full-time income. In Canada, you can earn small amounts of cash or gift cards through platforms like Swagbucks, InboxDollars, Freecash, and Paidwork by watching video ads, trailers, and sponsored content. Typical earnings are just a few cents per video, with an effective hourly rate of $1 to $5. Be extremely wary of social media ads claiming you can "get paid to watch Netflix" or "earn money for TikTok screen time"—these are usually third-party marketing tactics or outright scams, not official platform programs.

How Does Watching Videos for Money Actually Work?

Advertisers need real people to watch their content. Platforms act as the middleman, taking a cut of the advertising revenue and passing a portion on to you in the form of points, coins, or cash.

Common types of videos you'll be paid to watch include:

Short video ads and brand promos

Movie or TV show trailers

Sponsored tutorials or explainer videos

Playlists of curated content (news, entertainment, music)

Earnings are usually tracked through a points system, not direct per-video payment. After watching, you often need to click a confirmation button or answer a simple question to prove you were paying attention.

Top Legit Platforms for Watching Videos in Canada (2026)

1. Freecash

Freecash ranks #4 in the Canadian iOS App Store for money-making apps and has over 60 million registered users with a Trustpilot score of 4.8 stars (260,000+ reviews). Beyond playing games, completing surveys, and testing apps, Freecash offers video-watching tasks through its Offerwall system.

Earning rate: 1,000 coins = $1

Payout methods: PayPal, bank transfer, crypto, gift cards

Minimum cashout: Low (varies by reward type)

Speed: Payouts processed within 30 minutes on average

Verdict: The most versatile option. Video watching is just one of many ways to earn, making it easy to stack rewards.

1. Swagbucks

Swagbucks is one of Canada's most established rewards platforms. Watching videos is a supplementary feature—most users earn more from surveys and cashback shopping than from video playlists alone.

Earning rate: 100 SB = $1

Payout methods: PayPal, gift cards (Amazon, Starbucks, etc.)

Minimum cashout: $1 for gift cards

Daily potential: $1–$5 for active users (across all activities, not just videos)

Verdict: Reliable and well-known. Good for passive video watching while doing other tasks, but don't expect to get rich.

1. InboxDollars

InboxDollars built its reputation on "get paid to watch videos." It offers curated video playlists that play automatically while you do other things.

Earning rate: Fractions of a cent to a few cents per video

Payout methods: Direct cash (PayPal or cheque)

Sign-up bonus: $5 for new users

Minimum cashout: $15

Verdict: Pays in actual cash, not points. The trade-off is very low per-video earnings. Best used as background noise while working on other tasks.

1. Paidwork

Paidwork supports Canadian users and offers a low minimum withdrawal threshold.

Payout methods: Bank transfer, PayPal

Minimum cashout: $1–$5 CAD

Speed: 1–2 hours

Earning methods: Watching videos, surveys, microtasks

Verdict: Fast payouts and low thresholds make it worth trying, but video tasks are limited and pay modestly.

1. Prime Opinion

While best known for surveys, Prime Opinion occasionally offers video-based tasks in its offers section.

Earning rate: 100 points = $1

Payout methods: PayPal, gift cards, charitable donations

Minimum cashout: $6

Speed: Typically within 10 minutes

Verdict: Not a dedicated video platform, but worth checking if you're already using it for surveys.

How Much Can You Realistically Earn?

Let's be honest: watching videos will not make you rich. Here's a realistic breakdown:

| Platform | Per-Video Earnings | Hourly Rate (Estimated) | Monthly Potential (Casual Use) |
|---|---|---|---|
| Freecash | $0.01–$0.05 | $0.50–$3 | $5–$30 |
| Swagbucks | $0.01–$0.03 | $1–$5 (with other tasks) | $10–$50 |
| InboxDollars | $0.005–$0.02 | $0.50–$2 | $5–$20 |
| Paidwork | $0.01–$0.04 | $0.50–$2 | $5–$25 |
| Prime Opinion | $0.02–$0.10 | $1–$4 | $10–$40 |

The bottom line: If you're watching videos purely for money, your effective hourly rate will be very low.

These platforms are best used passively—while watching TV, commuting, or doing other tasks—rather than as a focused income activity.

Red Flags: Watch Out for These Scams

"Get Paid to Watch Netflix" Ads

You've probably seen ads claiming Netflix pays you to watch shows. Netflix does not pay viewers. These ads are typically:

Lead generation schemes that collect your personal information

Affiliate marketing funnels for unrelated products

Outright scams designed to steal your data or money

If it sounds too good to be true, it is.

"TikTok Screen Time" Scams

Similar ads claim TikTok will pay you for time spent on the app. TikTok does not have a viewer payment program. These offers usually require you to:

Download suspicious apps

Provide sensitive personal information

Pay an upfront "registration fee"

Recruit friends (pyramid scheme structure)

Fake "Watch and Earn" Apps

Some apps promise high payouts for watching videos but:

Never actually pay out

Require you to deposit money first

Have impossibly high withdrawal thresholds

Disappear after collecting user data

Rule of thumb: Never pay to join a platform that claims you'll earn money. Legitimate platforms are free to join.

Tips to Maximize Your Video-Watching Earnings

Use multiple platforms. Different platforms have different video inventories. Rotating between 2–3 apps increases your earning opportunities.

Let videos play in the background. Many platforms allow auto-play playlists. Run them while doing other tasks (cooking, cleaning, working).

Focus on higher-paying tasks. If a video task pays more than a survey of similar length, prioritize it. Always compare effective hourly rates.

Cash out regularly. Points can expire, and platforms can change their terms. Withdraw as soon as you hit the minimum.

Avoid platforms with high withdrawal thresholds. A $50 minimum cashout means you'll wait a long time to get paid. Look for $1–$10 thresholds.

Check Trustpilot and Reddit first. Before signing up for any platform, search for reviews. If it has no presence on Trustpilot or Reddit, be suspicious.

Never pay to join. Legitimate platforms generate revenue from advertisers, not from users' deposits.

Track your time. If you're spending 10 hours to earn $5, that's $0.50 per hour—not worth it. Focus on platforms that offer better returns.

Frequently Asked Questions

Can you actually make money watching videos in Canada?

Yes, but the amounts are very small. You can earn a few dollars per week through platforms like Swagbucks, Freecash, and InboxDollars. It's best viewed as a way to earn pocket money for time you're already spending on your phone, not as a meaningful income source.

How much can I earn per hour watching videos?

Realistically, $1 to $5 per hour. The highest-paying video tasks might reach $5–$10 per hour, but these are rare and often require additional actions beyond just watching.

Which platform pays the most for watching videos in Canada?

Freecash and Swagbucks offer the best combination of earning potential, payout speed, and reliability. InboxDollars pays in actual cash but has lower per-video rates. Paidwork offers fast payouts but fewer video tasks.

Is it safe to use watch-and-earn platforms?

Legitimate platforms like Swagbucks, Freecash, and InboxDollars are safe to use. They collect basic demographic data (age, location, interests) but don't require sensitive financial information. Avoid any platform that asks for your Social Insurance Number, banking passwords, or payment upfront.

Do I need to pay taxes on video-watching earnings in Canada?

Yes. The Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) requires you to report all income from all sources. If you earn a significant amount from these platforms, you should report it on your tax return. Keep records of your earnings.

Why do some videos pay more than others?

Longer videos, videos requiring more engagement (like answering questions), and videos from higher-paying advertisers typically pay more. Some platforms offer bonus tasks for watching certain types of content.

Can I watch videos while doing other things?

Yes—this is the best strategy. Many platforms allow auto-play, so you can run videos in the background while cooking, cleaning, or working. Just check in periodically to confirm you're still watching.

What's the difference between watching videos and completing surveys?

Surveys pay more per hour ($3–$15) but require active participation. Videos pay less ($0.50–$5 per hour) but can be done passively. The best approach is to combine both—watch videos in the background while completing surveys when you have focus time.

Bottom Line

Watching videos to earn money is a legitimate way to make a little extra cash in Canada, but it's not a get-rich-quick scheme. Platforms like Freecash, Swagbucks, InboxDollars, and Paidwork offer real opportunities to earn small amounts by watching ads and sponsored content.

The key is to set realistic expectations. You won't replace your income, but you can earn a few dollars per week for time you're already spending on your phone. Use videos as a passive earning activity while doing other tasks, and always prioritize higher-paying activities like surveys or cashback when you have focused time.

And remember: if an ad promises you hundreds of dollars for watching Netflix or TikTok, it's almost certainly a scam. Stick with established, legitimate platforms and never pay to join.
