YouTube TV Free Trial: How to Get 3 Months of YouTube TV Free

November 3, 2026

If you are searching for a YouTube TV free trial 3 months offer, there is an important distinction to understand before signing up. YouTube TV currently provides eligible customers with a free trial, while its main plan can also come with an introductory promotional price for the first three months. The current official plans page shows a 5-day free trial followed by a discounted three-month promotional period.

So, a three-month YouTube TV promotion does not necessarily mean that the entire three months are completely free. Instead, the current offer combines temporary free access with discounted subscription pricing. This distinction is useful when comparing the different YouTube TV free offers available in 2026.

Is There a Three-Month YouTube TV Free Trial?

The phrase YouTube TV free trial 3 months is widely searched, but the current official offer needs to be understood correctly.

YouTube TV's current plans page shows a 5-day free trial on its main plan. After that trial, the current promotion provides the main plan at a reduced monthly price for the first three months.

The current promotional price shown by YouTube TV is $59.99 per month for the first three months instead of the listed regular price of $82.99 per month. The official page says this saves $69 over the first three months.

Therefore, if you are looking for three months of YouTube TV access at a lower introductory price, there is currently a promotion that matches that intent.

If you specifically want three completely free months, you should check the offer shown to your Google account because the standard public offer is not currently presented as a three-month free trial.

How to Get the Current YouTube TV Offer

Start by visiting the official YouTube TV plans page.

Select the main YouTube TV plan and look for the current trial and promotional details. The official page currently displays the free-trial period along with the promotional monthly rate for the first three months.

You will need a Google account to sign up. You also need to provide a valid payment method.

Google's terms explain that eligible users are not charged until the applicable free-trial period ends. After the trial, the promotional subscription price applies according to the offer terms.

Before completing signup, check the checkout page carefully. It should show the trial period, promotional price and applicable billing information.

YouTube TV Free Trial Length

The YouTube TV free trial length is not always identical for every user.

The public YouTube TV plans page currently advertises a 5-day trial on the main plan. However, Google's official offer terms also list extended 10-day and 21-day trials for customers who receive those specific offers.

This means that you may see a different trial period from another YouTube TV customer.

The exact offer shown during your own signup is the best reference.

YouTube TV Free Trial 3 Months vs 3-Month Discount

This is the most important distinction for this keyword.

A three-month free trial would mean that no subscription payment is required for three months.

A three-month promotional offer means that you receive a reduced subscription price during the first three months.

The current main YouTube TV promotion falls into the second category. The official page currently shows a 5-day free trial followed by a discounted price of $59.99 per month for the first three months.

After the promotional period, the listed standard rate is currently $82.99 per month, although Google notes that prices can change.

This makes the current offer useful for someone who wants to reduce the initial cost of YouTube TV, even though it is not three months of completely free service.

Can YouTube TV Be Free?

Is YouTube TV free? Not as a permanent subscription.

YouTube TV is a paid live television service. Its free component comes through temporary trial offers.

The service also frequently uses promotional pricing. The current main plan includes a free trial and three months of introductory pricing.

The most accurate way to think about YouTube TV free access is therefore:

A free trial can temporarily provide access before billing.
Promotional offers can reduce the subscription price for a limited period.
Regular subscription billing applies after the applicable promotional period.

Does YouTube TV Have a Free Trial?

Yes. Eligible users can receive a YouTube TV free trial.

The current public plan page shows a 5-day free trial for the main YouTube TV plan. Google's offer terms also describe longer 10-day and 21-day trials for users who receive those specific offers.

Trial eligibility can depend on your account history. Google's current base-plan offer terms say the promotion is for customers who are not current subscribers and have not previously been YouTube TV subscribers or participated in a YouTube TV Base Plan trial.

YouTube TV Free Trial 14 Days or 30 Days

People searching for YouTube TV often look for longer trial periods such as 14 days or 30 days.

The current official terms show 5-day, 10-day and 21-day trial structures depending on the offer. They do not establish a universal 14-day or 30-day trial for every customer.

Therefore, if a 14-day or 30-day offer appears for your account, read the terms shown during signup. If it does not appear, an older promotion should not be assumed to remain available.

What Can You Watch With YouTube TV?

YouTube TV is designed for live television rather than only on-demand video.

The main plan currently offers more than 100 channels and includes local programming. Its channel selection covers sports, news and entertainment.

The service also has specialized plans. The current Sports plan includes more than 30 channels, while the News + Entertainment plan includes more than 70 channels.

This gives users several ways to choose a package based on the type of live TV they watch most frequently.

YouTube TV Live

The term YouTube TV live refers to the platform's live-channel experience.

When you open the YouTube TV app, you can browse the live guide and choose a channel or program that is currently airing.

This makes the service similar to a traditional television subscription, except the programming is delivered through the internet.

You can watch live sports, news, local programming and entertainment through supported devices.

YouTube TV App

The YouTube TV app is the main way to use the service on compatible mobile and television devices.

You can install the app on supported smart TVs and streaming platforms, then sign in using the Google account connected to your YouTube TV subscription.

On mobile devices, the app allows you to browse live programming and access your saved content while away from your television.

How to Use tv.youtube.com/start

If you are setting up YouTube TV on a compatible television, the TV may display an activation code.

In that situation, use tv.youtube.com/start to connect the television to your Google account.

Open the activation page on another device, sign in if necessary and enter the code displayed on your TV. Follow the instructions provided on screen to finish activation.

Once the device is connected, you can open YouTube TV and begin watching available live programming.

YouTube TV DVR

YouTube TV includes cloud DVR functionality.

Rather than saving recordings to a physical box, your recordings are associated with your YouTube TV account. This allows you to access saved programs through compatible devices.

The DVR can be particularly useful when live programming conflicts with your schedule.

YouTube TV Devices

YouTube TV is designed to work across multiple device categories.

You can watch through supported smart TVs, streaming devices, computers, smartphones and tablets.

This flexibility makes it possible to use the same subscription in different environments.

For television setup, the YouTube TV activation process can connect compatible devices through the official activation page.

What Happens After the Three-Month Promotion?

Once the introductory three-month promotion ends, the subscription moves to the applicable regular rate unless you cancel.

The current official page lists the standard main-plan price at $82.99 per month, although Google notes that the rate is subject to change.

This is why it is useful to know both the promotional price and the post-promotion price before subscribing.

If you decide that YouTube TV is not right for you, Google's terms allow you to cancel the subscription. For the free trial, cancellation before the trial ends avoids the trial-to-paid charge.

YouTube TV Promotions in 2026

The main YouTube TV offer is not the only promotion available.

The current plans page also lists a Sports plan with promotional pricing for the first six months and a News + Entertainment plan with promotional pricing for its first three months.

Promotions have eligibility conditions and expiration dates, so they can change.

For someone searching YouTube TV free trial 3 months, the main plan's three-month promotional period is particularly relevant because it combines the initial free trial with three months of reduced pricing.

Final Thoughts

For anyone searching YouTube TV free trial 3 months, the current offer needs to be understood as a combination of a free trial and an introductory three-month discount rather than automatically as three months of completely free television.

The official YouTube TV plans page currently shows a 5-day free trial on the main plan and a promotional price of $59.99 per month for the first three months, compared with the currently listed regular price of $82.99 per month.

Other customers may receive different trial lengths because Google's terms include extended 10-day and 21-day offers for selected users.

For the most accurate result, check the offer shown after signing into your Google account, review the trial end date and confirm the promotional price before completing signup.
