1. Join TikTok's Creator Rewards Program

One of the most direct ways of making money on TikTok is through the platform's creator monetization program.

TikTok has replaced the original Creator Fund in many markets with the Creator Rewards Program, which is designed to reward eligible creators for qualifying original content.

The exact eligibility requirements and availability can vary by country and can change over time. Generally, creators need to meet requirements related to age, account status, followers, video views, and original content.

If your account qualifies, eligible videos may generate rewards based on factors such as qualified views and other engagement-related signals.

How to start

1. Open TikTok and go to your profile.
2. Open the creator or TikTok Studio section.
3. Look for available monetization options.
4. Check whether the Creator Rewards Program is available for your account.
5. Review the current eligibility requirements.
6. Apply if you qualify.
7. Continue publishing original content that follows TikTok's guidelines.

This is one reason the search term TikTok Creator Fund still appears frequently, even though creators in supported markets may now encounter the Creator Rewards Program instead.

2. Make Money Through TikTok LIVE

Going LIVE can be another way to monetize an established TikTok audience.

During eligible LIVE sessions, viewers may interact with creators and send virtual gifts. Depending on TikTok's rules and the creator's location, eligible creators may be able to receive rewards associated with these interactions.

LIVE content can include:

* Q&A sessions
* Gaming streams
* Tutorials
* Product demonstrations
* Music and performances
* Behind-the-scenes content
* Educational discussions
* Live challenges

The key is to give viewers a reason to stay. Simply starting a LIVE session does not guarantee earnings.

A creator with a smaller but highly engaged community can sometimes build stronger LIVE interactions than an account with a much larger audience but limited engagement.

3. Work With Brands and Sponsors

Brand partnerships are one of the most common answers to how do you make money on TikTok.

Companies pay creators to introduce their products or services to an audience that matches their target market.

You do not necessarily need millions of followers to attract a brand. Micro-creators can be useful to companies because they often have a focused audience and a specific niche.

For example, creators may work with brands in areas such as:

* Fitness
* Beauty

* Technology
* Gaming
* Fashion
* Food
* Travel
* Education
* Personal finance
* Lifestyle

A typical sponsored campaign might involve creating one or more TikTok videos featuring a product.

Your potential value to a brand depends on factors such as audience size, engagement, niche, content quality, location, and campaign requirements.

Always disclose sponsored relationships appropriately and follow TikTok's branded-content rules and applicable advertising requirements.

4. Use Affiliate Marketing

Affiliate marketing allows you to earn a commission when people purchase a product or complete another qualifying action through your affiliate link.

This can be particularly useful if your TikTok content naturally involves product recommendations.

For example, a technology creator might create videos about:

* Budget smartphones
* Computer accessories
* Headphones
* Gaming equipment
* Useful apps

A beauty creator could feature skincare or makeup products, while a fitness creator could discuss workout equipment.

The basic process is:

Create useful content → recommend a relevant product → send interested viewers to an affiliate offer → earn a commission on qualifying conversions.

The important part is relevance. Promoting random products simply because they offer commissions can damage audience trust.

5. Sell Your Own Products

Another way to make money with TikTok is to sell something you own or create.

Depending on your business, this could include:

* Physical products
* Clothing
* Accessories
* Digital products
* Templates
* Online courses
* Ebooks
* Artwork
* Print-on-demand products

TikTok can work as a discovery platform that sends potential customers toward your store or sales page.

For example, someone who creates drawing tutorials could promote printable drawing worksheets. A fitness creator could sell a workout guide, while a cooking creator could offer recipe collections.

Your TikTok videos should provide genuine value instead of turning every video into a sales pitch.

6. Drive Traffic to Your Business

TikTok does not have to be the place where you receive the payment.

You can use TikTok to attract people to an existing business.

For example, a local business might post short videos demonstrating its products, while an online company might use educational videos to generate website traffic.

Some businesses use TikTok content to promote:

* Websites
* Online stores
* Services
* Apps
* Memberships
* Courses
* Consulting
* Freelance services

This approach is particularly useful because a TikTok video can introduce your business to people who would otherwise never discover it.

7. Become a TikTok Affiliate or Promote Marketplace Products

Where available, TikTok's shopping and affiliate features can provide another monetization route.

Creators can showcase products in their videos or other eligible TikTok content and potentially earn commissions from qualifying purchases.

For example, a creator might make a short video explaining why a particular product is useful rather than simply showing the product.

Good product content usually answers questions such as:

* What does this product do?
* Who is it for?
* What problem does it solve?
* What are its advantages?
* Are there any limitations?
* Is it worth considering?

Honest demonstrations can be more effective than generic promotional videos because viewers can understand the product before deciding whether to buy it.

8. Offer Paid Services

TikTok can also help you find clients for services you already provide.

Suppose you are a:

* Graphic designer
* Video editor
* SEO specialist
* Photographer
* Social media manager
* Tutor
* Fitness coach
* Music teacher
* Web designer

You can create short videos demonstrating your expertise.

For example, an SEO specialist could post quick website optimization tips. A video editor could show before-and-after editing examples.

The TikTok video itself may not generate direct platform revenue, but it can bring potential clients to your business.

This is an important distinction when considering how to make money off TikTok: monetization does not always mean TikTok pays you directly.

9. Build a Niche Audience

Building a focused audience can make several monetization methods easier.

Instead of creating completely unrelated videos, consider choosing a clear topic or group of topics.

Examples include:

Gaming

Gaming creators can post gameplay, tutorials, updates, guides, reviews, and tips.

Fitness

Fitness creators can share workouts, exercise demonstrations, and educational content.

Technology

Tech creators can cover apps, gadgets, tutorials, comparisons, and troubleshooting.

Food

Food creators can publish recipes, restaurant content, cooking tips, and product recommendations.

Personal Finance

Creators can discuss general financial education, budgeting concepts, saving strategies, and money-related tools while avoiding misleading promises.

A focused audience can be valuable because brands and customers know exactly what type of content you create.

10. Repurpose TikTok Content Across Other Platforms

Creating one useful video does not mean you have to use it only on TikTok.

With appropriate rights and platform rules in mind, creators can adapt their original content for other platforms such as YouTube Shorts, Instagram Reels, Facebook, or their own website.

This can help you build multiple traffic sources rather than depending entirely on TikTok.

For example:

One original video → TikTok → YouTube Shorts → Instagram Reels → Facebook → website

Each platform can contribute to audience growth and potentially support a different monetization method.

However, avoid blindly uploading identical content everywhere. Adjust titles, captions, formatting, and calls to action for each platform.

How Many Followers Do You Need to Make Money on TikTok?

There is no single follower number that guarantees you can make money on TikTok.

Different monetization methods have different eligibility requirements.

For example, an official creator monetization program may have specific follower and view requirements, while affiliate marketing or selling your own service may not require the same number of followers.

A creator with a small, targeted audience may earn through services or affiliate products before reaching a large follower count.

This is why can you make money on TikTok is not simply a question of follower numbers.

The more useful questions are:

* Who watches your content?
* What problem does your content solve?
* How engaged is your audience?
* What products or services are relevant?
* Which monetization options are available in your country?

How to Get Monetized on TikTok

If your goal is to get monetized on TikTok, start by checking the monetization features available in your own account.

TikTok's programs can differ by region, account type, age, and other eligibility factors.

A basic strategy is:

1. Create an eligible TikTok account.
2. Choose a specific content niche.
3. Publish original videos consistently.
4. Follow TikTok's Community Guidelines.
5. Build genuine engagement.
6. Check TikTok Studio for available monetization features.
7. Apply for programs when your account becomes eligible.
8. Diversify your income instead of depending on one feature.

Remember that meeting a follower requirement alone does not automatically guarantee approval or earnings.

Does TikTok Pay for Views?

Some eligible TikTok monetization programs can reward qualifying content based partly on qualified views and other factors.

However, you should not assume that every TikTok view automatically generates money.

The amount a creator can earn can vary considerably depending on the monetization program, audience, content, location, eligible views, and other factors.

This is why statements claiming that TikTok always pays a fixed amount for every 1,000 views should be treated cautiously.

How to Make Money on TikTok Without Going Viral

You do not necessarily need a viral video to start building an income stream.

A smaller account can focus on a specific audience and monetize through:

* Affiliate marketing
* Brand partnerships
* Digital products
* Services
* Consulting
* Online courses
* Product sales
* Qualified creator programs

For example, imagine a TikTok account with 10,000 followers focused entirely on affordable home technology.

If those followers trust the creator's recommendations, affiliate products or sponsorships may be more relevant than simply chasing millions of views.

The goal should be to build an audience that actually cares about your content.

How to Make Money on TikTok Videos

If you specifically want to make money on TikTok videos, focus on creating content that has a clear purpose.

Some useful video formats include:

Tutorials

Show viewers how to do something in a simple series of steps.

Product demonstrations

Show how a product works and explain its practical benefits.

Reviews

Give honest opinions about products, apps, services, or tools.

Educational videos

Teach one useful concept in a short format.

Problem-solving videos

Identify a common problem and demonstrate a solution.

Story-based videos

Use personal experiences or interesting stories to keep viewers watching.

The best format depends heavily on your niche and audience.

TikTok Creator Fund vs. Creator Rewards Program

The phrase TikTok Creator Fund is still commonly searched by users looking for TikTok monetization information.

However, TikTok has introduced the Creator Rewards Program in markets where it is available.

Rather than assuming that an old Creator Fund article applies to your account, check the current monetization options shown inside TikTok.

Program names, availability, and eligibility requirements can change, so always rely on the current information available for your region.

Creator Rewards Program in the Philippines

Creators searching for the Creator Rewards Program in the Philippines should check whether the program and its current requirements are available to their account and location.

TikTok's monetization features can vary between countries, so information that applies to creators in the United States or another market may not automatically apply to creators in the Philippines.

Before planning your income around a specific program, verify the current requirements directly through TikTok's creator tools.

Tips for Making More Money on TikTok

If you want to turn TikTok into a long-term income channel, consider these principles:

Choose a monetizable niche

Some niches naturally have more products, services, and sponsorship opportunities than others.

Create consistently

Consistency helps you test different topics and discover which formats your audience responds to.

Focus on retention

A video needs to keep viewers interested. Start with a clear hook and get to the useful part quickly.

Build trust

Do not recommend products you would not reasonably recommend to your audience.

Diversify income

Avoid depending completely on one monetization feature.

Track your results

Pay attention to views, watch time, engagement, clicks, conversions, and follower growth.

Follow platform rules

Copyright violations, misleading claims, fake engagement, and other policy violations can put your account and monetization at risk.
