Quick Answer: The highest-paying survey sites in Canada include Prime Opinion, Freecash, Testerup, Branded Surveys, Survey Junkie, LEO (Leger Opinion), and Ipsos iSay. You can earn anywhere from $0.25 to $10 per survey, with most surveys paying between $0.50 and $3. The best survey sites in Canada offer PayPal payouts, low minimum withdrawal thresholds, and regular survey opportunities. To maximize your earnings, sign up for multiple platforms, complete your profile, and consider higher-paying interview or product-testing surveys.

Introduction: Can You Really Make Money with Paid Surveys in Canada?

Completing online surveys is a popular side hustle to help you earn a little extra money. You won't earn enough to make you rich or replace a full-time income, but it's a legit way to give your bank balance a boost. If you're looking for paid surveys in Canada, here are sites worth checking out.

Online surveys have become one of the most accessible ways for Canadians to earn extra cash from home. Whether you're waiting for your coffee to brew, commuting on public transit, or relaxing on the couch in the evening, you can turn spare minutes into spending money. The concept is simple: companies need consumer opinions to improve products and services, and they're willing to pay for them.

But not all survey sites are created equal. Some offer higher payouts, faster withdrawals, and better user experiences than others. Some are completely legitimate, while others waste your time with endless screening questions and disqualifications. This guide will help you navigate the Canadian survey landscape and find the platforms that actually pay.

1. Freecash

How much it pays: Earn $0.50 - $3, with surveys typically taking 5 to 10 minutes. Other offers are available, such as playing games and testing apps. Freecash says users can earn an average of $30 per hour, but this depends on how engaged they are and the tasks they choose. There's also a Freecash bonus for new users.

Who they are: Freecash was launched in 2020 and is available worldwide. Its parent company is Germany's Almedia Online LLC, and this GPT (get-paid-to) platform provides multiple ways for users to earn extra income. Freecash has an average rating of 4.7/5 based on over 162,000 Trustpilot reviews.

How to get paid: You can cash out to your PayPal account or redeem your rewards for a variety of gift cards, Visa prepaid cards or cryptocurrency.

Why Freecash Stands Out for Canadian Users

Freecash has quickly become one of the most popular get-paid-to platforms globally, and for good reason. Unlike traditional survey sites that focus solely on questionnaires, Freecash offers a diverse range of earning opportunities through its Offerwall system. You can play mobile games to reach specific milestones, test new apps, complete surveys, and sign up for various products and services.

The platform's coin-based system is straightforward: 1,000 coins equal $1. You accumulate coins by completing offers, and once you reach the minimum threshold, you can cash out through multiple payment methods. The cryptocurrency payout option is particularly unique among survey sites, appealing to users interested in digital assets.

For Canadians looking to maximize their earnings, Freecash offers some of the highest-paying game offers available. Some users report earning hundreds of dollars from a single game offer that requires reaching a specific level or achievement. However, these high-paying offers often require significant time investment and sometimes in-app purchases to progress faster.

1. Testerup

How much it pays: Earn $0.50 - $10 per survey.

Who they are: Testerup is a platform that pays users to answer surveys, test apps and play mobile games. Launched in 2022 as Testery, Testerup is run by German market research company aestimium GmbH. The Testerup platform claims to have more than 2.9 million users.

How to get paid: Cash out to your PayPal account. Cash-out limits of $20 - $250.

What to Watch Out For

Minimum withdrawal of $55, which is higher than some platforms

Some user complaints about low payouts

Some users complain about being screened out of surveys

Long-term commitment required for high-paying offers

Why Testerup Stands Out for Canadian Users

Testerup differentiates itself by focusing on app testing and game playing alongside traditional surveys. The platform is particularly appealing for users who enjoy mobile gaming and want to monetize their hobby. With over 2.9 million users, Testerup has established itself as a legitimate player in the get-paid-to space.

The earning potential on Testerup is among the highest in the industry, with some game offers paying up to $800. However, these high-paying offers typically require reaching specific levels or achievements within games, which can take weeks or months of consistent play. Some offers also require in-app purchases to progress faster, which can eat into your overall earnings.

For survey-focused users, Testerup offers surveys paying $0.50 to $10 each. The higher-paying surveys are usually longer and more complex, often requiring 15 to 30 minutes to complete. The platform's minimum withdrawal of $55 is higher than many competitors, so you'll need to accumulate significant earnings before cashing out.

1. LEO (Leger Opinion)

How much it pays: Up to $2 per survey, with surveys commonly ranging from 5 to 30 minutes.

Who they are: LEO is an online survey site and mobile app for users in Canada and the US. It's run by Leger Marketing Inc., a Canadian market research and analytics firm that was founded in 1986 and is headquartered in Montreal. In return for completing surveys on the LEO website or app, you'll receive LEO points that you can redeem for a wide range of rewards.

How to get paid: Redeem your LEO points for Aeroplan points, cash via PayPal, a virtual prepaid Mastercard, a range of gift cards or charitable donations. Minimum withdrawal of $20.

What to Watch Out For

High minimum withdrawal limit

It may take up to 10 business days for rewards requests to be processed

Not a full-time income

Survey availability varies by demographic

Why LEO Stands Out for Canadian Users

LEO is one of the few survey platforms specifically designed for Canadian users, which gives it a unique advantage. As a Canadian company based in Montreal, Leger Marketing has deep roots in the Canadian market research industry and understands the unique demographics and consumer behaviors of Canadian households.

The platform offers a variety of survey opportunities, from short 5-minute questionnaires to longer 30-minute studies. The reward options are particularly diverse, including the ability to convert your points into Aeroplan miles—a popular loyalty program for Canadian travelers. This makes LEO an excellent choice for users who want to maximize their travel rewards alongside cash earnings.

LEO also runs weekly and monthly contests that give users additional chances to earn rewards. The platform is free to use and available on both iOS and Android devices, making it easy to complete surveys on the go.

1. Branded Surveys

How much it pays: Earn between $5 and $100 per month.

Who they are: Launched in 2012, Branded Surveys is a US-based platform that pays you for completing surveys and polls. If you're a frequent user, its loyalty program lets you earn even bigger rewards.

How to get paid: Once you've accumulated 500 points in your account, you can cash out using a gift card or PayPal.

What to Watch Out For

No bank transfer payout option for Canadians

Some complaints about being disqualified after spending a lot of time on a survey

Limited earning opportunities compared to some competitors

Why Branded Surveys Stands Out for Canadian Users

Branded Surveys has built a reputation as one of the most reliable survey platforms over its decade-plus history. The platform's loyalty program is a standout feature—the more surveys you complete, the higher your loyalty level, and the more you earn per survey. This creates a strong incentive to make Branded Surveys your primary survey platform.

The points system is straightforward: 1 point equals US$0.01, and you need 500 points (US$5) to cash out. The platform offers over 100 gift card options in addition to PayPal cash, giving you plenty of flexibility in how you receive your rewards. Branded Surveys also supports charitable donations for users who want to give back.

The minimum cashout of $5 is among the lowest in the industry, making it accessible for casual users who don't complete surveys frequently. Payouts are typically processed within one to three business days, which is faster than many competitors.

1. Survey Junkie

How much it pays: Survey Junkie says that if you complete three surveys daily, you can earn as much as $40 monthly.

Who they are: Survey Junkie is an online market research platform run by DISQO, a California-based company founded in 2015. It's also BBB accredited and has an average rating of 4/5 based on over 44,000 Trustpilot reviews.

How to get paid: Withdraw money via PayPal.

What to Watch Out For

E-gift cards and direct bank transfer withdrawals are only available to users in the US

Some other platforms offer a wider range of money-making opportunities (not just surveys)

Some users complain about being screened out of surveys

Why Survey Junkie Stands Out for Canadian Users

Survey Junkie has become one of the most recognizable names in the online survey industry, thanks in part to its user-friendly interface and strong reputation. The platform is BBB accredited, which provides an extra layer of trust for users concerned about legitimacy.

The earning potential on Survey Junkie is modest but achievable. Completing three surveys daily can earn you around $40 per month, which adds up to nearly $500 annually. While this won't replace a full-time income, it's a solid supplement for minimal effort.

Survey Junkie also offers a unique "Surf to Earn" browser extension that rewards you for sharing your digital browsing activity. This provides an additional earning stream beyond traditional surveys. The platform's points system is simple: 1 point equals US$0.01, and you can cash out via PayPal once you reach US$5.

1. Prime Opinion

How much it pays: Earn up to $7 per survey.

Who they are: Prime Opinion is a free and highly rated survey platform run by US-based Prime Insights. It has over 18,000 reviews on Trustpilot with an impressive 4.3-star rating.

How to get paid: You can withdraw your rewards as cash via PayPal, get a Virtual Visa, choose from a range of gift cards or make a donation to charity.

What to Watch Out For

Bank transfer withdrawals are not available in Canada

Some users complain about getting disqualified from surveys

You get paid points rather than dollars

Why Prime Opinion Stands Out for Canadian Users

Prime Opinion offers some of the highest per-survey payouts in the Canadian market, with surveys paying up to $7 each. The platform's 100 points equals US$1 system is easy to understand, and the minimum withdrawal of $6 is relatively low.

The platform is known for its wide range of survey opportunities, meaning you're more likely to find surveys that match your demographic profile. Prime Opinion also offers the option to donate your earnings to charity, which appeals to users who want to support good causes while earning.

Prime Opinion's user-friendly app and website make it easy to complete surveys on any device. The platform processes payments quickly, with many users reporting receiving their PayPal payments within minutes of requesting a withdrawal.

1. Ipsos iSay

How much it pays: Earn approximately $0.25 to $1.50 per survey.

Who they are: Ipsos iSay is run by market research company Ipsos, which was founded in 1975. Ipsos is headquartered in Paris, France and has members in over 50 countries worldwide.

How to get paid: Redeem your reward points for cash via PayPal or for gift cards, prepaid cards and charitable donations.

What to Watch Out For

Slow access to funds when cashing out via PayPal

Gift cards expire in a few months up to a few years after they are issued, so be careful not to let any of your cards expire

Some users complain about getting disqualified from surveys

Lower per-survey payouts compared to some competitors

Why Ipsos iSay Stands Out for Canadian Users

Ipsos iSay benefits from being backed by one of the world's largest market research companies. Ipsos has been operating since 1975 and has members in over 50 countries, giving the platform a level of credibility that newer survey sites can't match.

The platform offers a steady stream of survey opportunities, though individual payouts tend to be lower than some competitors. The reward options are diverse, including PayPal cash, gift cards, prepaid cards, and charitable donations. The ability to donate to charity is a nice option for users who want their survey participation to support good causes.

Ipsos iSay's global reach means you may occasionally qualify for international surveys that offer higher payouts. The platform is available on both web and mobile, making it easy to complete surveys wherever you are.

Where Do You Find the Highest-Paying Online Surveys in Canada?

Payment for taking an online survey can range anywhere from around $0.50 to $120 per survey, depending on the platform's payout structure and the survey's complexity.

Shorter surveys, which usually take about 5 to 20 minutes, may only pay $1 to $5 per survey.

In general, the longer the survey, the higher the payout. Users report that interview and testing-style surveys that involve phone calls or video recordings usually offer the highest payouts, sometimes ranging from $50 to $120, depending on the complexity and time invested.

Most user testing and online survey platforms pay through PayPal, but these platforms usually don't calculate tax withholdings for you, which might impact your earnings.

Types of Surveys and Their Typical Payouts

Survey Type	Typical Duration	Typical Payout
Quick polls	1-5 minutes	$0.10 - $0.50
Standard surveys	5-20 minutes	$0.50 - $5.00
Extended surveys	20-45 minutes	$3.00 - $15.00
Product testing	30-60 minutes	$10.00 - $50.00
Phone interviews	30-60 minutes	$25.00 - $75.00
Video interviews	45-90 minutes	$50.00 - $120.00

Expert Insight

"For Testerup, Prime Opinion and Ipsos iSay, I had to answer pre-screening questions to see if I fit the target demographic. I'd say I wasn't eligible for 30% to 40% of the surveys I tried to complete, but all three platforms offered partial pay for most of the surveys I was screened out of, unlike other platforms I've tried, like Five Surveys. Being screened out so many times meant it took me an hour or two to reach the minimum $5 withdrawal for Ipsos iSay and Prime Opinion. Testerup's minimum withdrawal is $55, but after 2 hours, I only had around $10 in my wallet, so I gave up."

Which Survey Sites Have the Fastest Payouts in Canada?

There are two factors to consider if you want to make money fast from online surveys: the minimum cashout amount and how quickly withdrawals are processed.

Survey Junkie, Prime Opinion, Freecash and Ipsos iSay are all solid options if you're searching for fast payouts. All three sites offer low minimum cashouts of around US$5, and all offer fast access to your funds via PayPal. Prime Opinion even claims that you can make your first cash withdrawal in as little as 17 minutes from completing surveys.

Fastest Payout Survey Sites Comparison

Platform	Minimum Cashout	Payout Speed	Payment Methods
Prime Opinion	$6	~10 minutes	PayPal, gift cards, donations
Freecash	$5 - $20	~30 minutes	PayPal, gift cards, crypto
Survey Junkie	US$5	Few hours	PayPal
Ipsos iSay	Varies	Up to 10 business days	PayPal, gift cards
Branded Surveys	$5	1-3 business days	PayPal, gift cards
LEO	$20	Up to 10 business days	PayPal, gift cards, Aeroplan
Testerup	$55	Up to 48 hours	PayPal

How to Maximize Your Earnings from Paid Surveys in Canada

If you'd like to make surveys a real side hustle, consider these tactics:

1. Download the App

If you sign up for a survey site with its own app, download the app to your phone. This will make it easier and more convenient for you to participate in surveys whenever you have some spare time. Mobile apps often send push notifications about new survey opportunities, ensuring you don't miss out on high-paying surveys.

1. Complete Your Profile

When you sign up for an account on any online survey platform, take the time to answer any profile questionnaires. This will help ensure that you are matched with more surveys that align with your lifestyle and interests. The more demographic information you provide, the more targeted survey invitations you'll receive.

1. Dedicate Time to It

Taking surveys can be time-consuming. Many Reddit users say they take surveys during their downtime, such as while watching TV. The key is to integrate survey-taking into your existing routine rather than trying to find extra time in your day.

1. Consider Live Interviews and Testing

Short surveys are easy, but long interviews and website or app testing can have much higher payouts. To maximize your earnings, consider live surveys that require a webcam and microphone. These opportunities pay significantly more than standard surveys and can be worth $50 to $120 each.

1. Sign Up for Multiple Platforms

Since your availability for surveys and tests often depends on your demographic profile, joining multiple platforms can widen your chances of qualifying for paid surveys in Canada. Different platforms have different clients and different survey needs, so being on multiple sites increases your opportunities.

1. Check In Regularly

Turn on your email notifications or make a habit of checking the survey site daily to take advantage of new opportunities as they crop up. High-paying surveys often fill up quickly, so being among the first to respond can make a significant difference.

1. Use a Dedicated Email Address

Create a separate email address for survey sites to keep your main inbox organized. This also makes it easier to spot survey invitations and ensures you don't miss time-sensitive opportunities.

1. Be Honest in Your Responses

Survey platforms use attention checks and consistency questions to ensure data quality. Answering honestly and consistently will help maintain your account in good standing and may lead to more survey invitations.

1. Track Your Earnings

Keep a simple spreadsheet or note of your survey earnings, including the platform, survey length, and payment received. This helps you identify which platforms offer the best return on your time investment.

1. Be Patient

Building up meaningful survey earnings takes time. Don't get discouraged if you're screened out of surveys or if payouts take longer than expected. Consistency is key to maximizing your long-term earnings.

Survey Scams to Avoid in Canada

Getting paid to take surveys is a legitimate side hustle. Top sites like UserTesting.com and Prime Opinion have thousands of positive customer reviews, and we could not find news of major scams involving reputable online survey platforms.

Many posts labelling online surveys a "scam" stem from relatively low payouts, especially compared to a full-time job. But just because a survey only pays you $1, it doesn't mean it's a "scam"—legitimate survey sites state how much each survey pays upfront, and you get paid the advertised amount.

That said, some companies may not be truthful about how much you'll get paid or how long a survey will take. Check if a survey platform allows users to report misleading listings or has rules for handling these situations. If no such guidelines exist, it may not be a reliable platform.

Customer reviews are useful when evaluating survey sites. If a platform doesn't have a profile on Trustpilot or any threads about it on Reddit, it may not be legit.

Red Flags to Watch For Payment required upfront: Legitimate survey sites never ask you to pay to join or participate.

Requests for sensitive information: Avoid sites that ask for your Social Insurance Number, banking passwords, or credit card details.

Guaranteed high earnings: No legitimate survey site promises you'll earn thousands of dollars per month.

No privacy policy: Reputable platforms clearly explain how your data will be used.

No contact information: Legitimate companies provide ways to reach customer support.

Pressure tactics: Urgency to sign up or complete surveys is a common scam tactic.

How to Verify a Survey Site Is Legitimate in Canada

Check Trustpilot and Reddit: Search for the platform name plus "review" or "scam" to see what real users say.

Look for BBB accreditation: While not required, BBB accreditation indicates a company has met certain standards.

Start small: Complete a few low-value surveys and request a small payout before investing significant time.

Read the terms and conditions: Understand the payment terms, privacy policy, and any fees before signing up.

Use official app stores: Only download survey apps from Apple's App Store or Google Play Store.

Frequently Asked Questions

Are there survey sites that pay instantly in Canada?

Yes, several survey sites offer fast or instant payouts. Prime Opinion claims you can make your first cash withdrawal in as little as 17 minutes from completing surveys. Freecash typically processes payments within 30 minutes. HeyCash offers payouts within 10 minutes. Survey Junkie processes PayPal payments within a few hours. However, most platforms have minimum withdrawal thresholds you must reach before cashing out, ranging from $5 to $55. PayPal is the most common instant payment method, though some platforms offer gift cards or prepaid cards as alternatives.

What survey site pays the most in Canada?

The highest-paying survey sites in Canada are Prime Opinion (up to $7 per survey), Testerup ($0.50 - $10 per survey), and Freecash ($0.50 - $3 per survey plus other offers). However, the highest payouts typically come from specialized user testing platforms that require webcam and microphone participation, with payments ranging from $50 to $120 per session. For standard surveys, Prime Opinion consistently offers some of the highest per-survey rates in the Canadian market.

How long do paid surveys take in Canada?

Paid surveys vary significantly in length. Quick polls may take just 1 to 5 minutes, while standard surveys typically take 5 to 20 minutes. Extended surveys can take 20 to 45 minutes, and product testing or interview-style surveys may require 30 to 90 minutes. The general rule is that longer surveys pay more, but the effective hourly rate doesn't always increase proportionally. Some users find that completing multiple short surveys is more efficient than focusing on long, high-paying ones.

Can you make $100 a day from paid surveys in Canada?

Realistically, making $100 per day from paid surveys alone is extremely difficult and would require many hours of daily participation across multiple platforms. Most users earn $5 to $40 per month from survey sites, with dedicated users potentially earning $100 to $300 monthly by consistently completing surveys across multiple platforms. To earn $100 in a single day, you would likely need to qualify for high-paying user testing or interview opportunities, which are less frequent and more competitive. Survey sites are best viewed as a supplemental income source rather than a primary income replacement.

How many survey sites should I join in Canada?

Joining 3 to 5 survey platforms is generally recommended for maximizing earning opportunities without becoming overwhelming. Different platforms have different clients and survey needs, so being on multiple sites increases your chances of qualifying for surveys. Popular combinations include Prime Opinion, Branded Surveys, and Survey Junkie for standard surveys, plus Freecash or Testerup for game-based and app-testing opportunities. Start with two or three platforms, and add more if you find you have time to dedicate to additional sites.

Do I need to pay taxes on survey earnings in Canada?

Yes, income earned from paid surveys is generally considered taxable income by the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA). Whether you need to report it depends on the total amount you earn. If your survey earnings are occasional and minimal, they may not require reporting. However, if you earn a significant amount or treat survey-taking as a regular source of income, you should report it on your tax return. The CRA requires you to report all income from all sources. Keep records of your earnings and consult a tax professional if you're unsure about your obligations.

Why do survey sites screen people out in Canada?

Survey sites screen users out because market research companies need responses from specific demographic groups. If you don't match the target demographic for a particular survey—based on age, gender, location, income, or other factors—you'll be disqualified. This is a normal part of the survey process, not a scam. Some platforms offer partial payment for screened-out surveys, while others don't. To reduce screen-outs, complete your profile thoroughly and be honest about your demographics.

What information do survey sites collect in Canada?

Survey sites typically collect demographic information (age, gender, location, education, income), lifestyle information (hobbies, interests, shopping habits), and survey responses. They may also collect technical data such as your IP address, device type, and browsing behavior. Reputable platforms have clear privacy policies explaining how your data is used, stored, and protected. Your personal information should never be sold to third parties without your consent. Under Canadian privacy laws (PIPEDA), you have the right to access and request deletion of your personal data.

Bottom Line

Paid surveys in Canada offer a legitimate way to earn extra money in your spare time. While you won't get rich from completing surveys, the platforms listed in this guide provide real opportunities to supplement your income with relatively low effort.

The key to maximizing your survey earnings is to sign up for multiple platforms, complete your profiles thoroughly, and check in regularly for new opportunities. Consider combining standard surveys with higher-paying options like product testing, app testing, and live interviews to boost your hourly rate.

Remember to stick with established, reputable platforms that have positive user reviews and transparent payment terms. Avoid any site that asks for payment upfront or requests sensitive personal information. With the right approach, survey-taking can become a reliable source of extra cash that fits into your existing daily routine.

Whether you're saving for a specific goal, looking to cover small expenses, or simply want to monetize your downtime, the survey sites in this guide offer legitimate ways to turn your opinions into earnings.
