How Much Money Do TikTok Creators Get From Gifts?

One of the biggest questions about TikTok gifts is whether creators receive the entire amount paid by viewers.

The answer is no: viewer spending and creator rewards are different.

The general process works like this:

1. A viewer purchases TikTok Coins.
2. The viewer sends a Gift during a LIVE stream.
3. The creator receives rewards represented through Diamonds or TikTok's applicable reward system.
4. Eligible rewards may be converted or withdrawn under TikTok's current rules.

For illustration, some third-party calculators use an estimated value of $0.005 per Diamond. Using that model, a 1,000-coin gift may represent around $5 in creator value.

This is an estimate, not an official guaranteed payout rate. TikTok may apply eligibility requirements, regional rules, payout conditions, and other adjustments.

TikTok Gift Coins vs. Diamonds: What's the Difference?

Coins and Diamonds are related to TikTok's virtual gifting system, but they serve different purposes.

Coins | Diamonds

Purchased by viewers | Associated with creator rewards
Used to send Gifts | Used in TikTok's reward system
Have a purchase price | Have applicable reward and withdrawal rules
Spent during LIVE gifting | May be eligible for conversion or payout

A viewer should not assume that a creator receives the same cash amount that the viewer spent.
