How to Make Money on TikTok: TikTok Creator Fund, Rewards Program and Other Ways

Creator Fund · Rewards Program · 2026 | Updated October 28, 2026

TikTok can generate income through paid brand collaborations, affiliate marketing, eligible creator rewards, LIVE features, and product promotions.

If you are searching for how to make money on TikTok, you have probably come across terms such as TikTok Creator Fund, Creator Rewards Program, LIVE Gifts, sponsorships, and affiliate marketing. With so many monetization options available, it can be difficult to understand which methods actually apply to you.

The important thing to know is that TikTok income does not come from just one source. Depending on your location, account, audience, and eligibility, you may be able to combine several different methods.

Some creators earn through TikTok's own monetization features. Others use TikTok to promote products, attract clients, work with brands, or build an audience for a separate business.

This guide explains the main ways creators can potentially earn money from TikTok, how the old TikTok Creator Fund differs from newer programs, and how you can build a monetization strategy around your content.

Can You Make Money on TikTok?

Yes, TikTok can be used to generate income in several ways.

Some of the most common methods include:

* Creator monetization programs
* Brand sponsorships
* Affiliate marketing
* TikTok shopping features where available
* LIVE monetization
* Selling physical products
* Selling digital products
* Offering professional services
* Creating UGC for companies
* Promoting an external business or website

However, TikTok income is not automatic.

Having an account or getting views does not guarantee earnings. Different monetization methods have different requirements, and some features may only be available in certain countries.

Your goal should therefore be to understand which options are available to your account and then build content around a specific audience.

What Was the TikTok Creator Fund?

The TikTok Creator Fund was an earlier program designed to compensate eligible creators based on qualifying content performance.

Because the term became popular, many people still search for:

* TikTok Creator Fund
* TikTok Creator Fund requirements
* TikTok Creator Fund payment
* How to join TikTok Creator Fund
* How much does TikTok Creator Fund pay?

However, creators researching TikTok monetization today should also look at TikTok's newer Creator Rewards Program and other current monetization features.

The availability and rules of creator programs can change over time, so information from older Creator Fund articles may no longer describe the current situation.

What Is the TikTok Creator Rewards Program?

The Creator Rewards Program is one of TikTok's newer creator monetization programs in supported markets.

It provides eligible creators with an opportunity to receive rewards for qualifying original content.

The exact requirements and availability depend on factors such as the creator's location and account eligibility.

Potential requirements may relate to:

* Age
* Followers
* Video views

* Account standing
* Original content
* Account activity
* Regional availability

If you are interested in this option, check the monetization section of your TikTok account for the current requirements rather than relying on outdated information.

Creator Fund vs. Creator Rewards Program

The two names are often confused.

The Creator Fund was TikTok's earlier creator payment program, while the Creator Rewards Program is part of TikTok's newer monetization approach in eligible markets.

That means someone searching for "TikTok Creator Fund" should not automatically assume that old requirements or payment information still apply.

The most useful approach is to look at the current monetization programs available to your account.

1. Make Money Through the Creator Rewards Program

If your account is eligible, the Creator Rewards Program can provide a direct way to monetize qualifying content.

This method is particularly relevant to creators who already produce original videos and want to explore TikTok's own creator monetization system.

Before relying on this as your only source of income, consider the following:

* Check eligibility for your country.
* Review the current program terms.
* Publish original content.
* Follow TikTok's content policies.
* Monitor your analytics.
* Avoid artificial engagement.

TikTok can update monetization rules, so creators should regularly check the latest information within the platform.

2. Earn Through Sponsored Content

Brand sponsorships are another major way creators make money on TikTok.

A brand may pay you to create content that features its product, service, or campaign.

A sponsored video could be:

* A product demonstration
* Tutorial
* Review
* Lifestyle video
* Product comparison
* Educational video
* Brand introduction
* UGC-style advertisement

You do not necessarily need millions of followers.

A smaller account with a highly targeted audience can be relevant to a company if the audience matches the company's customer base.

For example, a gaming creator may attract brands selling gaming accessories, while a cooking creator could work with food-related companies.

Always disclose sponsored relationships appropriately and follow applicable advertising rules.

3. Use Affiliate Marketing

Affiliate marketing allows creators to earn commissions from qualifying sales or actions generated through their referrals.

This is useful because you do not have to create your own product.

Suppose you run a technology account.

You could create videos about:

* Smartphone accessories
* Apps
* Computers
* Gaming equipment
* Productivity software
* Home-office products

If viewers are interested in the product, they may use your affiliate link to learn more or purchase it.

The best affiliate content usually provides useful information instead of turning every video into a direct advertisement.

You could create:

* Reviews
* Comparisons
* Tutorials
* "How to use" videos
* Product demonstrations
* Buying guides

4. Use TikTok Shopping Features

Depending on your market and account eligibility, TikTok may provide shopping-related tools that allow creators to connect content with products.

This can shorten the path between discovering a product and considering a purchase.

For example, a creator could make a short demonstration showing how a product works and connect the content with an available shopping feature.

Availability differs by country, so do not assume that every creator has access to the same shopping tools.

If the feature is available to your account, check TikTok's current requirements and seller or creator terms.

5. Make Money Through TikTok LIVE

LIVE content gives creators an opportunity to interact with viewers in real time.

Depending on eligibility and regional availability, creators may have access to monetization features involving virtual gifts and other LIVE tools.

A successful LIVE session usually has a clear reason for viewers to participate.

Possible formats include:

* Gaming
* Q&A
* Tutorials
* Product demonstrations
* Educational sessions
* Discussions
* Entertainment
* Live challenges

You do not need a complicated studio to start experimenting with LIVE content.

A phone, reliable connection, and a clear topic can be enough if your account has access to the feature.

6. Sell Your Own Products

If you already have a business, TikTok can help you reach potential customers.

Physical products can include:

* Clothing
* Accessories
* Art

* Handmade goods
* Beauty products
* Hobby products
* Customized items

The key is to make the content interesting rather than simply showing an advertisement.

For example, instead of saying "Buy this product," you can show:

* How it is made
* How it works
* Different ways to use it
* Common mistakes
* Customer questions
* Before-and-after results where appropriate

This gives viewers a reason to watch even if they are not immediately ready to buy.

7. Sell Digital Products

Digital products can be another way to turn knowledge into revenue.

You might create:

* Ebooks
* Templates
* Checklists
* Guides
* Educational resources
* Printable files

* Design assets
* Spreadsheet templates
* Planning tools

For example, a creator who posts study tips could develop a study planner.

A creator who teaches budgeting could create a budgeting spreadsheet.

A designer could sell templates or digital assets.

The TikTok content can provide free information while the paid resource offers a more complete solution.

8. Offer Services Through TikTok

If you have a professional skill, TikTok can be used to attract potential customers.

Some examples include:

* SEO
* Web design
* Graphic design
* Video editing
* Writing
* Photography
* Tutoring
* Translation
* Consulting
* Social media management

The strategy is simple:

Teach → demonstrate expertise → build trust → attract inquiries.

For example, a freelance SEO professional could publish short videos explaining common website problems.

Someone who needs help with SEO may then visit the creator's profile and contact them.

This can work even when the account is not enormous because the audience may be highly targeted.

9. Create UGC for Companies

UGC stands for user-generated content.

In the creator economy, companies may hire people to produce short videos that demonstrate or promote their products.

The creator may not necessarily publish the content to a large personal audience. Instead, the company may use the video in its own marketing.

UGC examples include:

* Product demonstrations
* Tutorials
* Testimonials
* Unboxing-style content
* Lifestyle videos

* Problem-and-solution videos
* Voiceover advertisements

This can be an interesting option for people who enjoy creating videos but are still building their own audience.

10. Use TikTok to Generate Business Leads

One of the most overlooked answers to how to make money from TikTok is using the platform as a lead-generation tool.

You do not have to receive money directly from TikTok.

Instead, TikTok can introduce potential customers to your business.

For example:

A dentist can create educational videos.

A restaurant can showcase dishes.

A real estate professional can explain local property topics.

A marketing agency can share SEO tips.

A fitness professional can publish exercise education.

The videos attract attention, and interested viewers can become customers.

In this model, the value of TikTok comes from the customers it helps you reach.

How to Get Monetized on TikTok

If you want to use TikTok's own monetization programs, start by checking which features are available in your account.

The general process is:

Step 1: Build Your Account

Create original content consistently and develop a clear topic.

Step 2: Follow TikTok's Rules

Keep your account in good standing and follow the platform's content and monetization policies.

Step 3: Check Your Eligibility

Open the relevant creator or monetization section in TikTok and review the current requirements.

Step 4: Apply When Eligible

If a monetization program is available to your account and you meet its requirements, follow TikTok's application or activation process.

Step 5: Continue Creating Original Content

Getting accepted into a program does not replace the need for good content.

Continue monitoring your analytics and improving your videos.

How Do You Make Money on TikTok With 1,000 Followers?

There is no universal follower number at which income suddenly begins.

Some TikTok monetization programs have specific eligibility requirements, but other methods can work independently of those programs.

For example, an account with 1,000 highly targeted followers could potentially generate:

* Affiliate sales
* Service inquiries
* UGC opportunities
* Local business leads
* Digital product sales
* Niche sponsorship opportunities

This is why audience quality can matter as much as audience size.

How to Make Money on TikTok Videos

If you want your videos to become an income source, first determine what the viewer should do after watching.

For example:

Tutorial → Affiliate product

The video explains a solution and recommends a relevant tool.

Educational content → Service

The creator demonstrates expertise and attracts potential clients.

Product demonstration → Sponsorship

A brand pays the creator for promotional content.

Helpful content → Digital product

The free video provides a useful introduction while a paid resource provides additional detail.

This gives your content a logical connection to monetization.

Can You Make Money on TikTok Without Showing Your Face?

Yes.

Not every successful TikTok format requires a traditional talking-head video.

You can create content using:

* Screen recordings
* Voiceovers
* Tutorials
* Animations
* Product footage
* Gaming clips
* Hands-only demonstrations

* Educational graphics

For example, a software tutorial can be recorded directly from a computer screen.

A cooking account can focus on the food preparation process.

A gaming account can use gameplay footage with commentary.

The important consideration is that the content should be original and follow TikTok's rules.

Can You Make Money on TikTok Without Going Viral?

Yes.

Going viral can produce significant reach, but it is not the only path to monetization.

A smaller account can potentially generate income through a focused audience.

Consider a creator who posts videos about a specific professional software tool.

A video might receive only a modest number of views, but if some viewers are businesses that need help using that software, the account could generate service inquiries.

This is why creators should not judge every video solely by its view count.

How Much Does TikTok Pay?

There is no single payment rate that applies to every creator or every video.

Income through TikTok's creator programs depends on the applicable program, eligibility, qualifying views or activity, audience, region, and other factors.

Other income sources such as sponsorships and affiliate marketing work differently.

A brand may negotiate a campaign price, while an affiliate program may pay a commission based on qualifying sales.

A freelancer may earn based on the price of a service.

Therefore, "How much does TikTok pay per 1,000 views?" does not have one universal answer.

Creator Rewards Program in the Philippines

Creators in the Philippines may have different monetization options from creators in other countries.

If you are searching for the Creator Rewards Program in the Philippines, check the current availability and eligibility information shown for your TikTok account.

Do not rely on a requirement list created for another country.

Apart from TikTok's own creator programs, creators in the Philippines can explore options such as:

* Affiliate marketing
* Brand partnerships
* UGC
* Services

* Digital products
* Business promotion
* LIVE features where eligible

Regional availability can change, so current account information should take priority.

How to Build a TikTok Monetization Strategy

Instead of trying every monetization method at once, create a simple plan.

Choose a Specific Audience

Think about who you want watching your videos.

Select a Content Category

Choose a subject you can consistently create content about.

Build Trust

Teach, demonstrate, entertain, or solve problems before focusing heavily on selling.

Pick One Main Revenue Stream

For example:

* Affiliate marketing
* Services
* Sponsorships
* Products

* UGC

Add Another Revenue Stream Later

Once your audience understands your content, you can introduce additional monetization options.

This approach can make your account feel more natural than turning every video into a sales pitch.

Tips to Increase Your TikTok Earning Potential

Create Original Content

Develop your own examples, explanations, commentary, demonstrations, and presentation.

Make Your Niche Clear

Someone visiting your profile should quickly understand what your account is about.

Use Strong Hooks

Start videos with the most interesting part rather than a long introduction.

Answer Real Questions

Search-based and problem-solving content can attract viewers who are actively looking for information.

Build an Audience You Can Understand

Pay attention to what your followers ask, watch, save, and share.

Keep Your Monetization Relevant

If your audience follows you for gaming content, unrelated products may not perform well.

Track More Than Views

Look at engagement, profile visits, clicks, inquiries, conversions, and other metrics relevant to your monetization method.

Mistakes to Avoid

Relying Only on TikTok Payments

Platform-based monetization is only one potential revenue source.

Using Outdated Creator Fund Information

Older articles may describe requirements or programs that are no longer current.

Buying Followers

Artificial followers do not create a genuine customer base and can create account problems.

Copying Viral Videos

Repeatedly copying other creators does not create a sustainable brand.

Making Unrealistic Income Claims

Avoid guaranteeing specific earnings from TikTok.

Ignoring Regional Differences

A feature available in one country may not be available in another.

Final Thoughts

If you are learning how to make money on TikTok, it helps to separate TikTok's direct creator monetization from the many other ways the platform can generate income.

The old TikTok Creator Fund is still widely searched, but creators should also understand newer options such as the Creator Rewards Program and check what is currently available in their region.

Beyond TikTok's own programs, sponsorships, affiliate marketing, UGC, products, services, and business leads can all play a role in a creator's income strategy.

The strongest approach is to build useful original content for a clearly defined audience and then connect that audience with a monetization method that genuinely fits the topic. As your account develops, you can test additional revenue streams rather than depending on a single source.
